

High Regard

by Sean Taylor

He gazed upon her
With open-mouthed awe
But she was surrounded
By tall, thorny weeds

He opted to sit elsewhere
After taking one last glance
And whispering
"You are a beautiful tree, ma'am"

Though he did not know her name
He felt that she was held in high regard
Among the others